Greyhound buses move out – strikers angry

by The Associated Press

Greyhound buses – many of them virtually empty – pulled out of stations to the jeers of union members today for the first time since a strike halted the nation's largest intercity bus line two weeks ago.

Forty rowdy demonstrators were dragged away to police vans in Boston after delaying a bus for an hour.

In Philadelphia, hundreds of strikers joined by sympathetic unionized plumbers, carpenters, subway workers and Teamsters burst through a police line, surrounded a bus and pounded it like a drum, keeping it at the dock.

The only passengers on the Philadelphia bus were four reporters and photographers.

No injuries or violence was reported there or elsewhere against Greyhound workers or passengers. Pickets shouted "Scab bus, scab bus!" in Mobile, Ala., as the company resumed partial service.

FOUR PEOPLE were arrested in Washington for disorderly conduct. One pulled his car into the path of a bus and the others barged through a police line, police said. Nevertheless, Greyhound said its buses departed the nation's capital on time.

Four strike sympathizers were arrested in Minneapolis, where 300 strikers demonstrated, police said, and there were nine arrests in Detroit, where police reported 150 demonstrators.

A would-be passenger in Philadelphia, Pamela Matthews, 39, found herself surrounded by angry strikers as she tried to board the bus there. The woman, an employee of a nursing agency in Cherry Hill, N.J., said she had to get to Washington, but police finally told her the bus wasn't leaving and she was causing a disturbance. They said they would take her somewhere else where she could get a ride.

In Detroit, two gasoline bombs sparked a fire in a Greyhound yard Wednesday and slightly damaged two buses. Pickets delayed, but did not stop, two buses from leaving the downtown depot there.

Greyhound spokeswoman Dorothy Loran said ridership on the first buses was "light to moderate," but said she had no figures.

Pickets for the most part outnumbered passengers on the first buses leaving the bigger cities, apparently because bus riders feared violence and because Greyhound's main competitor, Trailways, matched the low fares being offered today.

Students elect 5 ACGFA reps

by Janet Boyer
staff reporter

Two hundred forty-four undergraduate students voted in Wednesday's at-large election for representatives to the Advisory Committee on General Fee Allocations (ACGFA), while 49 graduate students voted.

ACGFA, a 17-member committee, allocates part of the student general fees to about 20 organizations, according to Dr. Bob Arrowsmith, associate dean of students. They distribute about $242,000 to student groups, he added.

The four new undergraduate at-large representatives, taking their seats spring semester, will be Mark Dabowski, junior accounting major, Thomas Gallagher Jr., junior public administration major, Steven Hobbs senior economics major and Anthony Zurca, senior management information systems/sales major. Benjamin Harrington, graduate student, ran unopposed for the graduate position.

According to Arrowsmith, the number of students voting in this year's election was large for an election of its kind.

Even though more students voted this year than last, the lack of publicity is blamed for the still small number of student voters.

ADVERTISEMENTS were run in the paper but campaigning was left up to the candidates, Beverly Baker, Graduate Student Senate president, said.

Most of the campaigning done this year was by word of mouth.

"I told my brothers that I was running and I have other friends in other fraternities that I told," Zurca, Theta Chi president, said.

"The biggest problem I had when I campaigned was that most of the students didn't know what ACGFA was and I spent more of my time explaining what it is rather than campaigning," Hobbes said.

"I talked to people and told them to vote, but I honestly didn't have the money to advertise," Gallagher, the only independent elected, said.

Because of their membership in the greek system, the other candidates may have had a little easier time getting votes, he said, adding that he did not think that would have much effect on the committee.

Some controversy was raised concerning the fact that three members of the greek community were elected to the committee.

Along with Zurca, Dabowski is member of the Alpha Tau Omega fraternity and Hobbs is a member of the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity.

"IT APPEARS to me that they were the only people concerned enough about the ACGFA positions to run for them," Zurca said, adding that he didn't think that being greek was the motivating factor for running.

"I think it shows that the greeks may have more interest in the program," Hobbes said.

"Most of the campus views it (ACGFA) as an unimportant organization and that's sort of funny because about half of the students belong to groups that receive money from it," Zurca added.

Students cite reasons for joining Air Force ROTC

Editor's note: This is the last of a four-part series on the University's Reserve Officer's Training Corps.

by Teresa Perrelli

Some students are drawn to the idea of becoming a second lieutenant in the Air Force while earning a college degree. That is one goal members of the Air Force Reserve Officers' Training Corps have in common, but not all share the same reasons for joining the program.

"It's great to do something you want to do and get paid for it too,"

James Shaffer, sophomore pre-law major and member of AFROTC, said.

"Joining the Air Force may be one way to pay for college, but it is also something I'm really proud to be a part of. Whenever I'm in the uniform I show respect."

At the University 120 men and 30 women can be seen sporting the blue uniforms of the U.S. Air Force ROTC.

"Unlike the army, our students wear their uniforms from the beginning, we are looking at potential officers from the start," Cpt. Thomas Inskeep said.

To become an officer, a student must first enroll in a general military course offered to freshmen and sophomores. Courses such as Air Force Organization and Air Force History are taken by freshman and sophomore cadets.

AFTER SUCCESSFUL completion of the 100 and 200 level classes, ROTC members may be admitted into the Professional Officers Course.

AFROTC members are admitted into POC based on grade point average, SAT/ACT scores, an Air Force Officer's Qualifying Test and field training.

The Air Force Officer's Qualifying Test includes a general knowledge and aptitude test.

"A minimum GPA of 2.0 or 18 ACT composite score makes you eligible, but doesn't guarantee admittance," Inskeep said.

Included in the POC are courses such as Air Force Management, Flight Instruction Program, Ground School and Air Force Officership.

According to Inskeep, along with the traditional four-year program, a two-year program is available.

Students who have four semesters of any combination of undergraduate or graduate studies remaining, in addition to meeting physical requirements, may enroll.

The students opting for the two year program must attend a six week basic training camp.

"Upon successful completion of the AFROTC program graduates are commissioned as second lieutenants in the U.S. Air Force and will be called to active duty during the year following graduation," Cpt. George Faithful said.

"An Air Force base is like a regular city, we have jobs from civil engineer to policeman," Faithful said.

As a civilian, one is trained so that their skills may be applied to available jobs after serving in the Air Force. "When you get out of the Air Force you apply what you have been trained for to a related field of interest," Faithful said.

TRAINING TO be an officer as well as earning a college degree has helped individuals become more interested in the Air Force as a way to pay for college.

AFROTC Cadet Major John Corwin, a senior computer science major said, "When I was a freshman, my (ROTC) class wasn't that big. Today there are more and more freshmen coming in. The economy has a lot to do with the number of individuals enrolling in ROTC."

The number of individuals enrolling in ROTC seem to have a more positive attitude about the program. This is also reflected by the University's reactions to ROTC members.

'Emergency powers' in Grenada only temporary

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada (AP) – When Sir Paul Scoon assumed control of Grenada's government following the U.S.-led invasion, he issued a proclamation granting police sweeping emergency powers, banning public meetings and imposing a nighttime curfew.

"But the phrase 'emergency powers' didn't mean a thing," said the new legal adviser to Scoon and the newly formed Advisory Council which will govern the tiny Caribbean spice island until elections can be held.

"They (the powers) were only temporary and not really enforced," said Anthony Rushford, the English lawyer hired through the British Commonwealth to advise the new civilian administration in Grenada, a former British colony and a Commonwealth member.

Government documents indicate that when Scoon proclaimed a state of emergency on Nov. 4, a set of regulations was published by the Government Printing House outlining his powers and broadcast by Grenadian radio.

"The Governor General was only trying to prevent any potential danger to security," said Rushford, a constitutional law expert who drafted the constitution under which Grenada gained independence in 1974.

"ARRESTING PERSONS without necessarily bringing them to trial will not be continued any longer than necessary," he said.

He said he thought this detention would last only another week or two. But neither Rushford Police Commissioner Patrick MacLeish nor individual members of the Advisory Council could say how many arrests had been made by police under the emergency edict.

At the time of the invasion, about 100 political opponents of Marxist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop were in prison. Bishop was killed Oct. 19 following a coup by more militant members of his government. The invasion occurred six days later.

The U.S. Embassy said Tuesday the military prisoner-of-war camp at Point Salines had processed 530 Grenadians and 600 Cuban prisoners since the Oct. 25 invasion and will be dismantled.

Embassy spokesman Jim Dan-bridge said the Cubans were sent to Havana while all but 40 of the Grenadians were released. Those 40 were turned over to Grenadian authorities and sent to Richmond Hill Prison in St. George's.

RUSHFORD AND the Council's temporary chairman, Nicholas Braithwaite, a former chief education officer in Grenada, indicated that the panel would be considering the possibility of continuing, modifying or

Insufficient evidence of drug use

WASHINGTON (AP) – The House ethics committee, ending a 16-month investigation, said yesterday there is insufficient evidence to show that any current House member used illegal drugs or that a drug ring ever operated on Capitol Hill.

Committee Chairman Louis Stokes, D-Ohio, and Special Counsel Joseph Califano Jr. said the final report ends their probe into "allegations of the illicit use or distribution of drugs by members, officers or employees of the House."

But the committee's special counsel, Joseph Califano Jr., named three former congressmen who had used illicit drugs during their tenure in Congress.

Califano said former Reps. Frederick Richmond, D-N.Y., and John Burton, D-Calif., admitted to the panel under oath that they used drugs.

He said former Rep. Barry Goldwater, R-Calif., made no admission, but "There was substantial evidence of such activity."

Califano said Richmond and Burton "testified under oath after a grant of immunity as to their own use of drugs." Goldwater, he added, "declined to testify about his own personal drug use."

Cheers and Jeers

Cheers and Jeers is a quick wrap-up of issues around campus and in the community.

CHEER the Commuter Off Campus Organization for the volunteer work its members do in providing an escort service for students. Offered until midnight Sunday through Thursday, the escorts walk or drive people living on or off campus home to safety.

CHEER all those individuals who fasted yesterday in observance of World Hunger Week, and CHEER to the efforts of Oxfam America, a famine relief organization, to provide food to people of underdeveloped nations.

CHEER University students and faculty whose combined efforts raised over $50,000 for the United Way fund drive this year. The amount raised set a new record and surpassed last year's total by 7.5 percent.

JEER the inconsiderate people at Jerome and the Math Science libraries who, instead of spending a nickel to copy articles from periodicals, insist on ripping articles them from the book, effectively preventing anyone else from using the reference material. Competition may become fierce in college at times but come on.

JEER the city and campus for not providing sufficient lighting in a number of areas on and off campus. The south end of campus, University Lane and Thurston Avenue are dark areas in which students must travel home, facing possible danger of never seeing an attacker, or in the case of the two latter, a fast moving car.

South Mexican state may be seed of unrest

by Arthur Allen

The Mexican government is pumping money into the impoverished southern state of Chiapas, concerned that poverty could be the seed for social unrest along the border with strife-plagued Central America.

"If there is a seedbed for revolution in Mexico, it is Chiapas," said a state official who asked not to be identified because of political reasons. "We have neglected this area for centuries, and there are great social problems that must be resolved."

The government has invested $900 million in development projects in Chiapas state this year - twice as much in dollar terms as in 1982. Officials say the effort is to improve communications and step up social services in an area affected by an influx of Central American refugees and by protests of Mexican leftist and peasant groups.

Much of the money is going to build roads into isolated mountain and jungle regions. Other funding goes to build schools, health clinics and to clear up longstanding land disputes. All over the state, signs advertise works of the so-called "Plan Chiapas," a development project set up by President Miguel de la Madrid in May.

The 30,000 square miles of state territory - about the size of South Carolina - are covered largely by mountains and tropical jungle.

Its 450-mile border with Guatemala to the east, once an unguarded stretch of jungle and coffee plantations, has become a tightly guarded zone against daily incursions by scores of fleeing Central Americans, mostly Guatemalans.

Officials acknowledge that the state's 2.2 million inhabitants - a third of them Indians speaking little or no Spanish - have been neglected since Chiapas became part of Mexico in 1824.

Chiapas has the second highest infant mortality rate - 94 per 1,000 live births - among the 32 Mexican states. The overall rate for Mexico is 44 per 1,000. Chiapas also has the fewest doctors per capita, and 36 percent of the people over 15 cannot read.

Traditional disputes over land occasionally become violent. In March, 300 people were injured in violence after state elections. In the last three months there have been marches and demonstrations stemming from land disputes and from alleged police brutality.

Among the projects under "Plan Chiapas" is a 278-mile road that parallels the northern part of the Guatemalan border through the tropical Lacandon Forest.

Construction of the road, begun in 1980, has shot forward in the last six months and is expected to be completed within two years. Access to the area will permit oil exploration, tourism and control over the border by immigration authorities.

The state government spokesman, Daniel Flores Meneses, said the road, now about 70 percent complete, is being built to "open up an area of potential production in hydrocarbons... and to permit the conservation of archaeological sites."

But the road clearly has defense implications. One state official, who asked not to be identified, said "Chiapas is a geopolitical area; we can no longer allow it to be unprotected."

Almost all the refugees are Guatemalans fleeing anti-guerrilla operations by the military government.

Guatemalan troops have crossed the border in pursuit of refugees who have been settled there, and Guatemalan helicopters frequently violate Mexican air space, said Ignacio Ortiz, the local representative of the government's Commission to Aid Refugees.

The commission provides aid to 40,000 Guatemalan refugees in 83 camps along the border, but restricts them to the camps. Immigration, relief and international observers estimate there are 40,000 to 60,000 additional refugees living illegally in Chiapas.

Any Guatemalan found outside a camp is likely to be deported, according to relief workers in the area.

To stop the refugees, Mexico has increased the number of immigration authorities in the area. On one 80-mile stretch of mountain road between the border towns of Comitán and Motozintla, a reporter was stopped at six checkpoints. Two years ago, there were only two along the same stretch.

Once the road is finished, four hydroelectric plants are planned for the Lacandon Forest, inhabited by hundreds of Lacandon and Chol Indians.

The plans have drawn criticism from environmentalists, who say the 10,000-square-mile jungle has vital importance as an ecological reserve and home to the tiny Indian groups.

American alliances foster risks

by Kevin Prendergast

When George Washington suggested that the United States should work to avoid "entangling alliances," he lived in a much simpler world. Due to man's creativity and innovation in the last 200 years, war has become a much more technical and devastating ordeal in which single missiles are capable of wiping out millions.

But recent developments in U.S. foreign policy bring his words to mind. Presently, the United States has found its way into so many commitments around the world that a scorecard might be helpful to decipher just who we support and who we don't. It appears we have become entangled.

The easiest place to start would be in our own hemisphere. The recent invasion of Grenada and the presence of our troops there now makes that a military commitment. After the amount of effort and the loss of life that was expended there, it seems that the United States is now committed to keeping the island free. Although the present administration claims that military personnel will be withdrawn by Christmas, a promise we heard over a year ago concerning Lebanon, one must question how long U.S. non-military personnel will remain and how "non-military" those Americans actually are.

Moving west, we arrive in Central America, where American troops, either covertly or openly, are involved in hostilities. In one nation, we are supporting a regime being attacked by anti-government "terrorists" and in another, we are supporting anti-government "freedom fighters." It appears the difference between a terrorist and a freedom fighter is the amount of allegiance one pledges to America.

Further south, the United States recently became entangled in a war where we had alliances with both sides. To the dismay of many of our American allies, we supported Britain and rebuffed Argentina.

Moving across the Atlantic, we find a similar situation. The present conflict between Greece and Turkey over the northern part of Cyprus seems to be a touchy situation for the administration since we again have a treaty and are allied with both nations.

The situation in the Middle East, though, is much more complex. Once again, U.S. troops are involved in an armed conflict and many have lost their lives. We have vowed to continue our support as long as the many rival factions continue to fight. Looking at the historical nature of the conflict, the deep ideological principals involved, and the number of competing interests, our troops may be there for a few centuries.

Furthermore, the large number of troops already committed to Britain, West Germany, France, Italy, South Korea, the Philippines, and many more, add to our commitments. Numerous Naval task forces are being moved from "hot spot to hot spot" and a new generation of nuclear weapons are being installed in Western Europe.

Singularly, many of these situations are justifiable on their merits and intentions. But taken as a whole, they seem to paint a portrait of U.S. foreign policy many Americans may not continue to accept. These policies also bring with them some negative consequences that should be used as a balance.

One of those consequences is that the United States now faces a much greater risk of getting involved in a major armed conflict.

Few people stop to think about the consequences involved if Cuba or the Soviet Union decided to retaliate during the invasion of Grenada. They also don't consider the possibilities of the escalation of the war in the Middle East if Syria or Iran decide to attack U.S. positions. The tragedy in Beirut seems to indicate that forces will strike out at American positions. Furthermore, many Americans don't consider that now that the United States is deploying American nuclear missiles just minutes from most major Soviet cities, the Russians have every justification to do the same to American cities. Another attempt to blockade missiles in Cuba would be inconsistent with our own policies and a contradiction to our own actions.

A second major consequence that will accompany our increased military involvement around the world is that Americans should now expect more terrorist attacks on U.S. diplomats, soldiers, politicians, and anything or anyone else the terrorists deem appropriate. The bombs that tore through the Marine compound in Lebanon, the Lebanese embassy, and the Capitol building are all examples of what may be ahead. Terrorism is a fact that comes with the territory of interventionist policies.

The point here is not to paint a doomsday picture of the world; nor is it to criticize any one of the events mentioned above. The point is that Americans should now look at the whole picture of foreign policy instead of viewing foreign affairs as being a bunch of single isolated events. After viewing the total picture, they must decide if that is the course this country wants.

The fact that the president has twice deployed troops into combat situations without getting approval from any other branch of government and has increased military commitments throughout the world may give an impression to where that course may be leading. The fact that relations between the United States and the Soviet Union are at their lowest point since the end of the cold war and that our relations with our NATO allies are also chilling further illustrates our potential future course.

Once they have looked at the total picture involved and if they decide it is the desired course, then the consequences that accompany those policies, the increased chances of war and the increased incidence of terrorist attacks, must be accepted.

The post-Vietnam pacifism that swept the nation seems to have died and that extreme pacifism may not have been the best course for the nation. But, one should question if the opposite extreme is any better.

Another reader disputes his Union commentary

In your column, you stated that unions "have grown in political power out of all proportions to the size of their membership." Ate you suggesting, Mr. York, that the number of union workers is more disproportionate to their support in government than those who are there to support business interests? All workers benefit (yes, even the non-union workers) from hard fought labor victories such as the minimum wage law, and the National Labor Relations Board. Men would most likely be in coal mines for over 10 hours per day, and the women would be taking their piece-work home from the sweat shops if not for the valiant efforts of American labor unions.

You also stated that unions have traditionally been made up of too few minorities and women workers. This leads one to ask: Who discriminates? The union or the employer? There are suits in the courts today against companies accused of unfair hiring practices.

You suggested that unions think only of themselves in bargaining with financially strapped companies. You paint the executives as helpless against the union. Who is it that takes the pay and benefit cuts, the hourly worker, or the corporate executives? Delta Airlines net profits were off last year by 88 percent. At the bargaining table, union workers took pay cuts on several dollars per hour. During that year, the president of Delta was given a pay increase. His yearly salary was raised from $386,000 per year to $546,000 per year. This must come as a thank you to him leading the airline down the road of lower profits. Also in 1982, the vice president and vice chairman of Delta were given salary increases of over $70,000 per year, while hourly workers were being laid off, and janitors employed by Delta were given pay cuts of $2 an hour.

Over the years, unions have won the political representation they deserve.

Without unions, there would be no job security, unemployment benefits, workman's compensation, or even a minimum wage, to name but a few of the accomplishments of the non-discriminating American labor unions. In the past few years, union workers have taken wage cuts and made other concessions, only to be slapped in the face by managements' lining of their own pockets.

In conclusion, I must say that unions not only represent unions, they represent people, the people who are the union.

Wellness Center hosts smokeout campaign

by Marcy Grande
staff reporter

Yesterday, the display box in University Hall projected three different outlined pictures of pulsating lungs. The first lung was pink and labeled "normal." The second lung was covered with black sootlike blotches and it pulsed rapidly. It was labeled "emphysema." The third lung beat slowly like the first but it was slightly darker and shaped abnormally. It was labeled "cancerous."

The display box was part of the The Wellness Center's information table set up in conjunction with the American Cancer Society's day-long Seventh Annual Great American Smokeout, a campaign urging Americans to kick the habit just for one day in hopes that if a person can quit for 24 hours, he can quit forever, according to columnist Abigail "Dear Abby" VanBuren.

Those members of the University community who participated in previous smokeout campaigns and were successful reported improvement in their physical well-being, however most said it was not easy by any means, and going cold turkey is the hardest, but most effective way to stop smoking.

AFTER SIX YEARS of smoking, University employee Charles Flick quit smoking two years ago.

"It was the hardest thing I've ever done," he said. "I was grouchy, but now I feel so much better."

Other literature and campaign materials offered by The Well included pamphlets, brochures, buttons and cards containing information about how smoking affects the body and quitting strategies for smokers who want to quit.

Trish Continenza, a staff peer adviser for The Well, handed out buttons to nonsmokers that said, "Kiss me, I don't smoke."

And smokers trying to kick the habit or friends of smokers who were trying to get them to quit, were given the Larry Hagman Special Stop Smokin' Wrist Snappin' Red Rubber Band.

"Smokers are supposed to wear them on their wrist, and whenever they get the urge to pick up a cigarette, you snap their rubber band," Continenza said.

Couple gets 'kicks' from karate

by Patty Ritter

While some married couples spend their recreational time together bowling or golfing, Bob and Mary Anne Nicholson have found a different way to vent frustrations and "actively" spend time together.

The Pemberville residents have been the co-instructors of the University's Continuing Education karate classes for the past 10 years, and for them, working together as a team has had many advantages.

Bob, an electrician, teaches the beginning and advanced students, while his wife handles the intermediate group.

"My wife has more patience than I do so she works better with that group," Bob said. Mary Anne said she handles all the paper work and puts all of her husband's charismatic ideas into effect.

"Our work really complements each other's. We are a team," she said.

Becoming involved in the sport as a student at the University of Toledo in 1969, Bob now has a fifth degree (of eight possible degrees) black belt.

"I decided to give karate a try out of curiosity. I wasn't good enough to play varsity basketball at school, but I wanted to continue with my physical training," he said.

HIS WIFE, an accountant who also has a black belt, soon followed suit and joined her fiance in karate classes.

"Of course my reasons for becoming involved are multifold, but I started then to show my fiance how much I loved him," Mary Anne said.

When she first started in the sport Mary Anne said she was the only female in her class.

"I was really intimidated when I first started. I was really timid and the thought of being in front of people really upset my stomach. Going back to the class for the second time took a lot of guts," she said.

One-third of their students are women, which is something Mary Anne says she is proud of.

"Karate is a sport that doesn't matter what build or sex you are," she said. "All relationships stop once a karate belt is put on. What color you have around your waist is your ranking in class, no matter what sex you are."

Karate offers women an extra push that they might not get anywhere else in society, Mary Anne added.

BOB SAID he is glad his wife is involved in the sport and added that their involvement in the sport is accepted by their daughters, ages 11 and 7.

"Our daughters accept their mother in karate because it is something we have been doing since before they were born," Mary Anne said.

Because relationships and stereotypes stop when a karate belt is worn, Bob says women may have certain advantages in the sport.

"Women tend to be more graceful, flexible and faster, while men have more strength," he said. Both sexes benefit from the sport since it develops concentration, coordination, discipline and self-confidence.

Bob and Mary Anne say the students in their classes, half of which attend the University, have become a family to them.

Many of their students who received black belts are now teaching in neighboring cities. They affectionately refer to them as their "grandchildren."

"We were once studied" by a sociologist who argued with our methods of teaching. In class there's a very militaristic atmosphere, but once the belts come off it's 'let's go out and get a beer'," Mary Anne said.

"This is different than in the military. Even though we have our rankings by our belts, respect for upper levels, and our own protocol, friendships flourish in the group. You won't find the generals and the privates going out for a beer after basic training," Bob said.

State liquor stores will advertise brand names

COLUMBUS, Ohio (AP) - Ohio's monopoly liquor stores are being dressed up with brand-name advertising although the state doesn't really care which products the customers choose.

As a pilot project, the liquor control department is permitting ad displays in 75 of the 306 stores it operates around the state.

Rozanne Glass, public information officer for the agency, says one of the reasons is to encourage distillers to go along with a so-called bailment system in the procurement of store stocks.

Under that system, stocks are delivered directly to the stores rather than being shipped to rented warehouses where the state has kept huge inventories in the past.

Glass said the state will save an estimated $59 million this fiscal year with expanded use of the bailment system.

The distillers provide the cardboard ads, limited to three per store. The state gets no price breaks in the purchase of liquor for allowing them, Glass said.

Otherwise, she said the project is part of a modernization program which started about 10 years ago when most customers had to stand at the front of stores and choose from printed lists.

THE NEW ADS are often colorful and eye-catching, like those seen in slick magazines. "We feel we have sort of a responsibility to the customers who don't like to be in dark, dingy, dreary places," Glass said.

She said the state is not concerned about what brands the customers buy. "The decision to buy has been made when they (the customers) walk in the door," she said.

The criteria for choosing which brands should be advertised apparently is rather loose, although Glass said they are usually picked from the top five best-selling products.

"They try to pick brands in each (liquor) category which show sales growth," she said, adding that this is an element of the state's merchandising technique.

But she stressed that the department "has to walk a fine line. We are not promoting liquor. We are not promoting drinking. We don't put posters in the windows."

Teen kills 'to know what it felt like'

NEWPORT, Ky. (AP) - A teenager, accused of fatally slashing a 68-year-old man "to know what it felt like to kill," was indicted yesterday for the Nov. 5 murder, authorities said.

William Thompson, 19, of nearby Dayton, Ky., remained in the Campbell County Jail while a county grand jury indicted him for the murder of Cecil Browning, a retired shoe repairman. Browning's throat had been slashed, he had been repeatedly stabbed and sulfuric acid had been poured on his body, police said.

Thompson is jailed without bond to await his arraignment on the indictment in Campbell County Circuit Court.

Mott Plummer, a Newport lawyer, has been appointed to defend Thompson.

Thompson surrendered to police in Bellevue, the nearby northern Kentucky town where the murder occurred, on Nov. 7.

Thompson told police that he had killed Browning and that he was upset because his girlfriend had recently left him, police Chief Elmer Corbin said.

Powers

eliminating the emergency powers in the next few days.

"There is bound to be an element of political tension during a situation such as this," Rushford said. "Some people may want not to cooperate with the civil government, and these would certainly be picked up."

He said the temporary restraint on public gatherings was considered necessary at the time it was issued but may no longer be valid.

And he indicated the nighttime curfew "was simply an exhortation by the Governor General: 'Please stay off the streets.' It was never enforced. It was never meant to be."

The informal curfew's hours were from 8 p.m. to 5 a.m., but they were ignored by virtually everyone who had a need to be out at night.

Five of the nine members of the new council were sworn in Tuesday at Government House, Scoon's residence. Scoon plans to hold elections in about six months.

A WHITE HOUSE task force arrived in Grenada yesterday to discuss long-term economic aid.

Greyhound driver disappointed with job

MEDINA, Ohio (AP) - A striking Greyhound bus driver says his job hasn't provided the steady employment and excitement he anticipated when he signed on with the bus company 11 years ago.

"If I knew then what I know now, I wouldn't have taken the job," driver Gerald Jeffries said.

Still considered a relief driver, Jeffries doesn't have scheduled runs for most of the year. He's constantly on call with two hours to report.

"You can get a call at noon, and you have to be there at two. You don't know where you're going or how long you'll be gone," he said.

And when the nationwide strike by 12,700 Greyhound drivers is over, Jeffries expects to return to work for less money than he was getting.

The bus drivers' strike to the nation's largest inter-city bus carrier began Nov. 2 in a contract dispute. Greyhound wanted the drivers to accept a 9.5 percent pay cut and contribute to pension and health benefits.

The bus carrier began operating limited services using replacement drivers yesterday. There was no resumption of bus service in Ohio, Greyhound officials said.

IN COLUMBUS, Smith Williamson, president of Local 1042 of the Amalgamated Transit Union in Columbus, said Greyhound passengers boarding buses yesterday in other cities are courting tragedy.

"They're not buying a ticket, they're buying a chance," Williamson said.

"With inexperienced drivers trying to deal with winter driving conditions, well, those people are no safety factor by any stretch of the imagination," Williamson said. "They're really taking a chance with these new people - a chance I wouldn't take."

BG seeks eighth win in season final with Kent

by Marc Delph
assistant sports editor

To the football fan who planned on writing-off tomorrow's Kent State-Bowling Green game after comparing the uneven records - 1-9 versus 7-3; consider the Golden Flashes' recent marks.

Though KSU has only won one game in the last five weeks, not one of them were the blowout-type contests they grew used to in the early stages of the season.

They lost by one point to an Ohio University team four weeks ago that nearly came back and dumped the Falcons last week, but ran out of time.

THE FLASHES were edged in the final seconds by an undefeated Toledo team 37-34, three weeks ago. And on that high note blasted Eastern Michigan the following Saturday.

Tomorrow the Flashes invade BG's Doyt L. Perry Field at 1:30 p.m. with the game as the only thing to lose. They enter the game with the thought of a 41-7 drubbing the Falcons handed them last year, and the desire to defeat the defending Mid-American Conference champion.

To a 1-9 team, the season could be made with this one victory.

"To coin an old phrase, Kent is the best 1-9 team I have ever seen," BG head coach Denny Stolz said. "They are the most improved team in the league.

"They have a good blitzing, gambling defense, along with a very fine passing scheme. They could easily have a .500 record in the MAC this year."

KSU'S BLITZ is the similar kind that OU capitalized on last week that aided in holding BG quarterback Brian McClure to 127 yards passing, his worst performance this season.

The Flashes are led by quarterback Stu Rayburn, who has thrown for 1,329 yards and seven touchdowns this season. His favorite receivers are Ken Hughes with 30 catches for 542 yards, and Joe Rucky with 28 grabs for 248.

KSU tailback O. D. Underwood rushed for an average of five yards per carry enroute to 530 yards this year.

To BG, a victory tomorrow would mean an 8-3 overall record, the best since former coach Don Nehlen carried the Falcons to an identical mark in 1975.

MCCLURE NEEDS JUST 17 yards passing for a MAC unprecedented mark of 3,000 yards through the air this season.

Split end Stan Hunter needs just 14 yards for a season total of 1,000 yards, while tight end Mark Dowdell leads the team with 62 catches.

Senior safety Martin Bayless will play in his 45th consecutive game in a Falcon uniform. He started every game since he joined the team as a freshman. Also, Bayless is tied for second in the all-time NCAA interceptions list with 27, he needs two more in his final game to tie the all-time mark made back in 1954 by Al Brosky of Illinois.

Falcons travel to New Hampshire

by Jean Dimeo
staff reporter

Coming off their third straight Central Collegiate Hockey Association sweep, Bowling Green's hockey Falcons will travel to Durham, New Hampshire this weekend to face the New Hampshire Wildcats in a non-league intersectional series.

The Falcons, off to their best start ever at 9-1 overall, will face the Wildcats in Snively Arena tonight and tomorrow night at 7:30 p.m. BG will be looking for two wins in this weekend's series - wins which could prove to be critical later in the season when at-large bids to the playoffs are being handed out.

"MORE EMPHASIS has been placed on interconference play," BG head coach Jerry York said. "Wins in these series could have a lot of bearing on at-large berths in the NCAA playoffs (National Collegiate Athletic Association)."

Last year, the Falcons were overlooked by the NCAA Tournament Selection Committee last March, citing BG's poor non-CCHA record of 1-2-1 as one of the reasons.

The Wildcats, currently 1-3 on the year, advanced to the NCAA playoffs last season with a 15-6-1 record in the Eastern Collegiate Athletic Association and 22-11-2 overall, but were eliminated by Minnesota in the playoffs.

The Falcons' remain in second place in the CCHA, one game behind league-leading Ohio State, following a two-game sweep over University of Illinois-Chicago.

Ohio And Michican Offer A Host Of Winter Fun

by Fred Rudin

Tired of sitting around in your room during weekends with nothing to do but homework? Why not chuck your books, grab your roommates and dive into the great, but chilly, outdoors this winter.

OK, so everytime you think of skiing, you visualize broken legs, wrenched backs, battered foreheads, ski poles up your nose and snow mounds caked onto your face - right? Yes, yes, you are right, these are all part of skiing, but if there was no challenge there would be no fun. So, ski!

And when you picture cross-country skiers, you see twigs and pine needles sticking out from cotton-knit caps as the clumsy athletes emerge from ill-fated runs through dense forests, and you casually look on as noses and ears dangle and finally fall off due to frostbite. But, if it wasn't 40 degrees below zero outside and your face didn't turn candy-apple red, then would you really enjoy it? So, cross-country ski!

AND THERE is more. What possible delight could anyone derive from sledding and tobogganing if an occasional finger wasn't sliced up or crushed while reaching under your favorite downhill racer? None, or very little, so sled and toboggan!

In addition, who could appreciate snowmobiling across a crisp, frozen lake on a clear Saturday afternoon if the ice didn't crack and sink at various warm water locations? You couldn't savor the experience if you never encountered untimely mishaps, so snowmobile!

Furthermore, who, in all honesty, would want to miss the sensation of losing all sensation in toes, feet, legs, fingers, hands and arms while standing around all day ice fishing on some desolate lake? It's got to be great, whatever one can feel of it, so ice fish!

The only boring winter recreational activity that comes to mind is snow camping. It's too private, snug, warm and cuddly - what could be worse on a frozen winter's eve? So, by all means, whatever you do - don't snow camp!

Networks Kill Season's Turkeys Before Thanksgiving

By Steve Gottlieb

The networks are trying to get rid of their turkeys before Thanksgiving with ABC canceling "It's Not Easy," CBS canceling "Cutter to Houston" and NBC "temporarily removing" "Manimal," "The Roustlers" and "For Love and Honor."

Besides their own ineptness, these shows were all victims of what NBC programming chief Brandon Tartekoff called, "A brick wall of established programming."

"It's Not Easy" was up against "Simon and Simon" and the increasingly popular "Cheers," "Manimal" and "For Love and Honor" were up against CBS powerhouses "Dallas" and "Falcon Crest." "The Roustlers" was beaten by the still popular "Love Boat" and "Cutter to Houston" was defeated by "T.J. Hooker" on ABC and "Different Strokes" and "Silver Spoons" on NBC.

What show will be the next casualty of the ratings race? It's a safe bet it won't be "Hotel," "After M*A*S*H" or "Scarecrow and Mrs. King," all finishing consistently in the top 20 of the weekly Nielsen ratings.

"Hotel," with its enviable time slot right after "Dynasty," only had to be moderately entertaining to succeed and it's definitely that. Like "Love Boat" and producer Aaron Spelling's other shows, "Hotel" successfully mixes interesting stories, a likeable regular cast and top guest stars to make a very entertaining show.

"After M*A*S*H," even if it wasn't any good, would also survive the year on the strength of its title alone. It's certainly not "M*A*S*H," but it's a funny show in its own right. Given time to develop, it will probably become an even better show.

"Scarecrow and Mrs. King" is also very entertaining with Kate Jackson and Bruce Boxleitner successfully portraying the kind of relationship that makes shows like "Remington Steele" and "Hart to Hart" fun to watch. This show is also blessed with a good time slot, competing only against ABC's "That's Incredible" and NBC's new show "Boone."

Also reasonably safe from cancellation are ABC's "Oh! Madeline" and "Hardcastle and McCormack," CBS's "Emerald Point N.A.S." and NBC's "We've Got it Made."

"Oh! Madeline" is another show blessed with a prime time slot, between "Three's Company" and "Hart to Hart." One critic once said that a test pattern could survive in that time slot and "Oh! Madeline" is funnier than a test pattern, which is more than can be said for a lot of shows.

"Hardcastle and McCormack" is another promising team with Brian Keith playing an eccentric retired judge and Daniel Hugh-Kelly playing his young streetwise partner. Early reports are that this amusing team is winning their time slot, suprisingly beating NBC's "Knight Rider" and CBS's popular sitcoms "Alice" and "One Day At A Time."

"Emerald Point N.A.S.," a soap opera starring Dennis Weaver, Maud Adams and other established stars, could be a big hit if it gets enough time to develop and given its relatively easy time slot, against "Monday Night Football" and an NBC movie, it'll definitely have it. Even if it doesn't succeed, almost no prime time soap has ever failed to survive at least a year.

"We've Got it Made" is a relatively funny show with a plot similar to "Three's Company." It is also similar to "Three's Company" in that it's star is a buxom blonde, Teri Copley. Unlike "Three's Company", however, it doesn't depend nearly as much on double entendres for its humor.

In the most serious trouble are ABC's "Just Our Luck" and "Trauma Center", CBS's "Whiz Kids" and NBC's "Mr. Smith" and "Jennifer Slept Here."

When "Just Our Luck" isn't being panned by the critics for being unfunny and demeaning to blacks, it's being ignored by the public in favor of Mr. T. and "The A Team."

"Trauma Center" is the unfortunate inheritor of the time slot that got "It's Not Easy" as well as "9 to 5" cancelled and unless it makes a much stronger showing than it has thus far, it's doomed to the same fate.

"Whiz Kids," about teenagers who solve crimes with a computer isn't a bad show but it's primarily geared toward adolescents who are already watching "The Fall Guy" or "Real People."

Even if "Mr. Smith" and "Jennifer Slept Here" were good comedies, they would have a hard time winning their time slot against "The Dukes of Hazzard," and since they're mediocre at best, they're going to have a problem.

Rodney's Rapid Fire Gags Earn Respect

by Fats Miller
Entertainment Editor

BOB DYLAN — Infidels (Columbia)

It's probably no coincidence that during this somewhat vacant period in the ongoing history of pop music Bob Dylan comes along with one of his most powerful efforts since the mid-70s.

Following 1981's somewhat satisfying Shot Of Love, this second post "born again" LP is overflowing with lyrical insight, musical punch and pure passion.

Aside from the strength of the songs themselves, the LP's striking character stems in part from the class of musicians Dylan chose for the record. Guitar slingers Mark Knopfler (Dire Straits) and Mick Taylor (ex-Rolling Stones) provide stinging solos and sympathetic rhythm parts throughout. Reggae rhythm masters Sly Dunbar (drums) and Robbie Shakespeare (bass) keep things moving and prove their versatility within this primarily non-reggae setting. Admittedly, it sounds like an odd grouping of folks, but Dylan hasn't had this kind of musical muscle behind him since his days with The Band. Take heart also in the fact that Dylan's singing voice has actually improved with age.

If you really don't care about the musical embellishments, you'll be pleased to know that as a lyricist the man is in top form here. He reserves his most astute and biting comments for the devil ("Man Of Peace") and the shortcomings of American capitalism ("Union Shutdown"), but there are some poignant love songs here too (most notably "Sweetheart Like You").

It's a genuine pleasure to hear an intelligent record that rocks without sounding clichéd, that offers ideas as well as riffs'n'rhythm. Welcome back, Bobby Zimmerman; Infidels is an obvious triumph.

RODNEY DANGERFIELD — Rappin' Rodney (RCA)

Rodney Dangerfield, the king of self-abusive one liners, is back with another collection of rapid-fire gags guaranteed to tickle your funny bone.

In addition to live recordings of his stand-up act, the LP's title track finds Rodney rappin' a series of jokes over a funky backing track which includes a female chorus that keeps repeating,

"No respect, no respect." It's a little hoky, but I can't blame the bug-eyed comedian for trying something different.

What's amazing is that he's covering the same ground as always — sex, his wife, his kids, his age, his other physical shortcomings — while making it sound fresh, and always funny.

A sampling: "I go fishing and catch nothing, I go to an orgy and catch everything. . . I caught my wife in bed with the milkman and she told me not to tell the butcher. . . my dog watches me in the bedroom so he can learn how to beg. . . my wife's so dumb it takes her an hour and a half to watch '60 Minutes'. . . I bought a book called 'How To Make It Big,' it was about money. . . I drink too much, my doctor found an olive in my urine test. . . when we got married my wife told me I was one in a million, I found out she was right. . . I know my wife cheats on me, every time I come home the parrot says, 'Quick, out the window'. . ." etc. etc.

Yeah, it gets a little repetitive, but more of the jokes score than not. His reprieve with the audience helps keep things a little spontaneous as well. Great album jacket, too.

MIDNIGHT OIL — 10, 9, 8, 7, 6, 5, 4, 3, 2, 1 (Columbia)

Midnight Oil takes one back a few years, to the time when new wave (or whatever you want to call it) was still eclectic and daring, rarely formulized like it is now.

This Australian quintet's alluring debut album is so good it's a bit hard to classify. Take a little Eno, add a dash of old 10cc, maybe a touch of Magazine, and you've got Midnight Oil.

Vocalist Peter Garrett has the presence and range that the diversity of song styles demand — most of the tracks change gears completely in mid-stream. The production is effectively sparse in places, with all instruments (bass, drums, guitar, keyboards) taking their turn in the spotlight without one ever completely dominating.

The only element lacking here is one song that would generate enough airplay to expose them to a broader audience. Then again, maybe that's a blessing. This is post-punk progressive pop at its best, challenging but fun.

Wearing Feathers Can Be A Unique Experience

by Scott Raymond Carpenter
Friday Editor

It's hard to be inconspicuous when wearing feathers. However, the University mascots, Freddie and Frieda Falcon, couldn't care less about being inconspicuous. On the contrary, being conspicuous is their job.

Selected at the end of last year, this year's mascots are about half finished with their terms. They appear regularly at all football, basketball and hockey games (though Frieda doesn't travel) and make several appearances throughout the year at other athletic and spirit-oriented functions.

When not "on stage," the falcons are in class, studying for a test or hanging around the Union. They're students. When in costume, identities kept secret, they are outgoing and even obnoxious.

"Getting fans going and keeping them going is a big deal to me," Freddie says. "I like to make people feel good."

"In essence, we're cheerleaders," Frieda added.

Both birds say being the secret spirit starters is great fun and never boring.

"We can joke a lot. I think we can work closer with the fans (than the cheerleaders) because we're right with them," Frieda said.

"FOR ME, when there's a section of the stadium where people aren't cheering and I go over and get them going that's the most fun part of my job," Freddie added.

Freddie also says holding down a job as the school mascot is difficult to define. He said sometimes he feels like a clown other times a performer and still others a cheerleader. "It depends on what aura you want to give Fred at the time," he said.

"When you get a one-on-one bit going it's more like being a performer and when you're running up and down the field or the floor it's like being a clown," he said.

Outragious as the Falcons are, Freddie notes that some control is involved in what he does. He said as the mascot he has learned who to jest with and who not to. "You learn to read people," he said.

For Freddie, doing what he does takes several hours a week of work. "I've had 40 to 50 hours of suit-time already," he said, adding "Fred is almost a full-time job."

FREIDA SAYS she sees her job as an honor. "I look at it as something that is a one of a kind."

The Falcons both agree that being able to display their shenanigans publicly without their real identities being bg news staff/Cari Lee Cilani seen is a personally gratifying experience.

"I want people to know about me," Frieda says, "but I know there's a time and a place."

"You learn a lot about human nature. . . You learn to get psyched after a week of tests and have to go out and do your thing in front so many people," Freddie said.

Freddie and Frieda say they receive many compliments and gifts playing the feathered creatures. Small children are especially drawn to them and bring candy and plenty of hugs and kisses.

"Somebody made a pair of BG gloves for me, really nice ones, but I don't know who it was so I can thank her," Frieda said.

THE IDENTITIES of the mascots will be kept a secret only a few more months. Each year the Freddie and Friedas (there are also two alternates) participate in a "beheading" at the last hockey and basketball games. Frieda said she is looking forward to that day because she said she feels it will show something special about herself that those close to her never see.

Wherever they're performing or clowning around, the Falcons do it like no one else. They start the crowd up and keep them up. They make the little ones smile and the older ones feel younger. Whatever the opinions of these feathered friends are, they are confident in what they are doing and know that wherever they spread their wings they spread spirit.

Freddie and Frieda serve many functions as the BGSU mascots. Besides being the spirit starters for most major sporting events at the University, they amuse children and students wherever they go and help to promote the BGSU name far beyond campus.

Frieda and Freddie antagonize WDHO-TV 24 sportscaster Jim Tishy. The birds filmed in a channel 24 holiday commercial Thursday afternoon in Anderson Arena.

'Star 80' Given New, Immediate Strength

by Associated Press

"STAR 80" is Bob Fosse's bleak and forbidding view of morality in the 1980s. The story of centerfold girl Dorothy Stratton has been told before, in a television movie and countless articles. But Fosse gives it new and immediate strength through his superior talent as a filmmaker.

As played by Mariel Hemingway, Dorothy Stratton is a mindless Vancouver, Canada, highschooler who is seduced by a sleazy psychopath, Paul Snider (Eric Roberts). He convinces her to pose for nude photographs, which help land her a contract with Playboy magazine. Welcome to Hefnerland.

The girl achieves the ultimate: Playmate of the Year. A sensitive film director, loosely patterned after Peter Bogdanovich, grooms her for stardom. But she is married to Snider, who reels increasingly out of control as his get-rich schemes fail and his wife draws away from him. The violent ending, which Fosse indicates throughout the film, is no less horrific when it comes.

Fosse wrote "Star 80" as well as directed, and his depictions of the Playboy world as well as the underside of Hollywood are uncannily accurate. But to what avail? Relentless doom hovers over the entire film.

Eric Roberts dominates the cast as Snider, and he is thoroughly frightening. Miss Hemingway has little shading to her character as the fated starlet and perhaps that is how Fosse intended her. Cliff Robertson does a solid impression of Hugh Hefner, and Carroll Baker makes a brief but effective appearance as Dorothy's mother.

Rated R for language, violence, sexual content and nudity.

If You're A Smoker There Is Aid Available

by Scott Raymond Carpenter
Friday Editor

So you tried to quit smoking yesterday but failed. You do realize that this failure is indicative of your personality, don't you (loser). Quitting the nicotine habit is without question simple for anyone with a backbone. I, for instance, have quit smoking dozens of times. Of course there are always the withdrawal symptoms of ending an addiction, but these too can be overcome and the addiction can finally be ended.

One thing that aided me in my smokeless days was a journal written by a man now doing time in a federal penitentiary for parking in a handicap zone:

Day One

I smoked my last cigarette at 11:59. It's a new day. A new challenge. In lieu of the absence of my former habit I've decided to grow a beard, something I've been wanting to do but just couldn't find the time. I expect the first few hours of my cigarette sobriety will be easy as I will be sleeping at the time and seldom smoke in my sleep. The one most memorable exception is the night I came back from a date with

Lorna Goodbody, an experience which taught me the meaning of the expression "Oh my God!"

Day Two

No problem. The only side effect I've noticed so far is a strange unexplainable desire to tie the legs of crickets into square knots and light them on fire. No more time to write. The girl across the hall brought home a date tonight and I wouldn't want the noise from the typewriter to ruin the tape.

Day Three

Don't panic but I think the whole goddamn world is coming to an end. It's just this weird feeling in my stomach that tells me something terrible is going to happen tonight. Kind of like the feeling your shorts give you after an extensive ride on a 10-speed bicycle. I haven't touched a smoke for two days, though, and I've never felt better. I think I've got this thing licked.

Day Five

Okay so I had a damn smoke, what's the big deal. It was one of those low tar things anyway. I don't have to smoke, I like to smoke. And this journal thing is ridiculous anyway. I'll quit writing and keep smoking so that all will be happy.

In retrospect, perhaps nonsmoking isn't for everyone. However a few helpful bits of information could make the difference between nonsmoking and smoking for you.

- Develop productive, practical and enjoyable hobbies that will keep you busy enough that you haven't time to think about how miserable you are without cigarettes. Try farming.

- Think of the ugliest person you can and picture that person with a cigarette in his mouth. Larry Flint, for example. This will give you a constant subliminal picture of what you don't want to become. A reciprocal plan can also be of great help. Try picturing yourself in a compromising position with a person of your choice. Then picture interrupting the whole shibang for a smoke. This is what did it for me.

- Eat onions. This will make it impossible to ask the person behind the counter at the drugstore for a pack of Marlboro without becoming embarrassed. (And don't send your big brother in for them like you do for condoms, it defeats the whole purpose.)

- Send your tax-deductable donation today to Editors For The Promotion Of Healthier Readers, c/o Scott Raymond Carpenter, Friday Magazine. You'll feel good about yourself and probably never, ever touch another cigarette as long as you live. (Check or money order excepted.)

Anyway, it's easy to quit smoking and everyone should do it so you can save money and be the healthier for it and all that BS. By the way, if you are successful and don't ever want to smoke again, send any extra packs of smokes or the unused portions of opened packs to me and I'll dispose of them properly.

FALCONS vs. FLASHES

Former Freddie Falcons Find Fun As A Flock

by Margie Pietrzak

"FRED-DIE! FRED-DIE! FRED-DIE!"

Cries echo throughout the BGSU Ice Arena. A feathered creation staggers on his skates, following the cheers of the fans. He fumbles in a pocket sewn into his wing for a hockey puck. The spectator's screams rise to a crescendo as the puck is flipped into their laps. Once again, Freddie Falcon, the University mascot, has skillfully whipped fans into a frenzy in time for the hockey team to step onto the ice. Freddie Falcon and his nest-mate Frieda have been the strength behind the spirit of BG fans.

Freddie's been a part of the BG spirit system since the 1940s, while Frieda has been delighting the crowds on a permanent basis for only about five years. The selection process begins in early April and possible candidates are chosen on the basis of dedication, inventiveness and enthusiasm. Four students are chosen. Two alternates serve at all home hockey games, and substitute, if necessary, for the other mascots. All Freddie and Friedas accept the fact that they must give up a great deal of their free time in order to fulfill their responsibilities. Often, that means turning down dates and parties in order to promote spirit among students. Yet this is only an example of the special kind of person it takes to be a school mascot.

Former Freddie Falcons still retain that enthusiasm. A group of them can be found at any home hockey game. Don't expect them to be the quiet ones, sitting in a corner, quietly keeping track of the game. Instead, direct your attention to the wild, uncontrollable, notorious section A. At least five ex-Freddie's are present at every game, often lead by the quick-witted, comical Rob Walker.

WALKER FREQUENTLY supplies the inhabitants of Section A with a wide assortment of puns, jokes and antics that rile referees, pester players and fire up fans. At the beginning of the games, an announcement is made concerning the upkeep of the ice and the dangers of flying pucks. Compliments of Walker and his band of bantering buddies, these instructions are made less repetitious by amusing play-action.

Pity the current Freddie Falcon who thoughtlessly wanders into Section A! Walker, like a hawk diving in for the kill, immediately assaults Freddie with insults, "Hey Freddie! Your mother's a rug." (Referring to the bird's carpet-like costume.) "Hey Freddie, would you like to come over for Thanksgiving dinner?" Walker quips. "Hey Section A! What do you like better with falcon? Stuffing or potatoes?" Walker's barrage is well-received by the Section A crowd, and Freddie obviously enjoys being shown the finer points of being a school mascot by one of the masters — Rob Walker.

MANY STUDENTS agree with Walker's appreciation of Freddie and Frieda Falcon. Most feel the task would be, in a word, "fun."

"I think it would be excellent to be Frieda! You could run around and goof off and have fun and no one would know it was you," Sandi Lutz, junior education major, said. "I like the idea of its secrecy. That would be so neat to see people's faces when I took off the head and they would see me under it all."

"It would be fun," Lutz says, "because I really enjoy working with children. I watch how the falcons act with kids. It seems like the kids really get a kick out of playing around with a big bird."

Karen Dunlap, listening to Lutz, interrupted, "I see what you mean about the secret part of it. It would be like trying to keep a secret from your best friend." A radio-television-film major, Dunlap says "I like the purpose behind Freddie and Frieda Falcon, and an organization like Sic-Sic. It might be fun sneaking around."

"You know though," she continued, "you don't get a lot of formal reward from being Freddie or Frieda Falcon. You'd be expected to act this way or that way but it really doesn't seem to gratify you. Many people are so afraid to tell someone they're doing a great job that they never get much feedback. It's not fair that such a good, useful, needed part of our school's traditions gets very little public praise."

The tradition of Freddie and Frieda Falcon will live on at the University. It's up to the public to see to that, and, so far, despite any negative feedback received, the Falcon mascots continue to put on a bright, silly show for the crowds. Who knows? Maybe this year's Freddie will return to Section A as a hockey heckler like Rob Walker.
